Kane is set to face another tough test as the Saints travel to Glasgow to take on Celtic. The Edinburgh club have amassed a record of 10 wins, four draws and just one defeat in their last 16 appearances against the Glasgow giants, winning seven of those matches. Pellegrino said: "It's a game that I think is very important for us for so many reasons and this team has worked hard to be up to such a level because we work and we prepare for these matches. "We will see how we can continue working and responding against the best team in the league. "The reason this team is in such a great way is because the players work hard and we have a lot of important games at the end of the season. "We know that Celtic are in a great way and it's an important game for us to qualify for the Champions League. "We work to give the best for the Edinburgh football club but it's a side that, if they're focused and focused, we could suffer in our game. "Let's see how we respond and we will see it in the future."Q: Retrieve rows which contains specified column value I have a table with fields, ID(int), Name(varchar), Number(int) I want to retrieve rows which contains a specified number. For Example, if i need the rows which contain number=2 then i want to retrieve the row such as ID Name Number 1 Test1 2 2 Test2 2 I tried by doing something like this, SELECT ID, Name, Number FROM Table1 WHERE Number=2 But this is giving me all the rows which contains the number=2 A: You can use a having clause in the WHERE clause of your query. select t.id, t.name, t.number from yourtable t where t.number = 2 having count(*) >= 1 But if you just want to query the numbers in the table that are equal to 2, then don't ask the database to do the work of finding all those rows. select t.id, t.name, t.number from yourtable t where t.number = Corticosterone causes the expression of amylin and insulin genes in the rat anterior pituitary. Studies using a competitive hybridization assay demonstrated that adrenalectomy (ADX) decreases the expression of amylin (AMY) and insulin (INS) genes in the rat anterior pituitary. To elucidate the role of corticosteroids in the regulation of AMY and INS genes, the effects of corticosterone administration on AMY and INS mRNA levels were examined in this study. The levels of AMY and INS mRNA in the pituitaries of rats were significantly decreased after acute corticosterone (500 microg/day s.c.) administration for 6 days. The decreased AMY and INS mRNAs were normalized with dexamethasone treatment (0.5 mg/day s.c.). The results suggest that corticosterone might act directly on the pituitary to produce AMY and INS.Q: C++: Increment a property in a class and pass it as a argument How do I assign a property (i.e. int x = 0;) to a class, increment the property, and call the class method where that argument is a member of a different class and passed to the constructor? In C# this would be called "Increment and use class-static-member; How would this be done in C++? A: This is possible with member function of non-static member class. Example: #include class test { public: int x; int getx() { return x; } void setx(int y) { x = y; } void inc() { x++; } }; int main() { test A, B, C; A.inc(); B.inc(); C.setx(A.getx()); // change B's value in C C.setx(B.getx()); // change A's value in C return 0; } come back from surgery… ever.
